Symptoms can exhibit for hours or days. Often times, once the trance lifts subjects are unaware that they have been under the Blood Washer’s trance. Many feel disoriented and nauseated when the trance breaks.

If early signs of the Blood Washer’s Syndrome are exhibited in a possible patient’s behavior it is best to avoid late night television, YouTube, Facebook, and Twitter for two weeks. Ultimately it is best for the patient to submit himself to psychological observation for 48 hours or until early symptoms subside.
